

CSSwap Summary: Overall the four members of the focus group were surprised that there was so much documentation involved in software development. They thought that it was just some people that know how to code sitting around a computer. There are a lot of relations of software that is used at work when user stories are brought up. Seeing how user stories are turned into functional and nonfunctional requirements and then transitioned into sprint and product backlogs was very interesting to them.